Internship: Impact Project

Project Overview

The National Fallen Firefighters Foundation (NFFF) is a non-profit organization headquartered in Emmitsburg, Maryland, on the grounds of the National Emergency Training Center (NETC). The NETC is managed by the Federal Emergency Management Agency for the Emergency Management Institute (EMI) and the U.S. Fire Administration's National Fire Academy (NFA). The NETC has a library used by EMI and NFA students who are firefighters and other emergency responders. In addition, researchers can access the NETC library online and request interlibrary loans.

In March 2020, the NFFF received a firefighter memorabilia collection from a private collector from Long Beach, California, who had collected memorabilia for more than 70 years. The collection included fire service books ranging from rare 1800 books to 1st edition textbooks to pop culture fire-related books. The books had been in storage for more than three years, and unfortunately, some books were damaged in a flood in September 2021. There was an urgency to determine what to do with the books to get them out of storage and make them available for use by others.

Thanks to a Memorandum of Understanding (see Appendix A) between the NFFF and NETC, the NFFF Library was created in a spare room in the choir loft of the National Fallen Firefighters Memorial Chapel on the NETC campus. This project was to create a special collection for the NFFF Library and incorporate the books into the NETC catalog, accessible on their website for USFA instructors, students, and researchers.

Baseline Assessment

The NFFF Library book collection was entered into an Excel spreadsheet listing the title, author, publisher, publication year, ISBN, Library of Congress Number, type of book, and any unique identifiers such as author signature. Some books did not have ISBN or Library of Congress Numbers as they were fire department publications, manufacturer catalogs, and international books. The spreadsheet began before the internship started but was finalized and updated during the internship period.

The condition of the book was also noted. After the flood, books were placed in plastic bags in an attempt to salvage some of them. Many of the books had visible mold or smelled of mold. Those books were determined not to be salvageable, so they were discarded.

The total number of books was 857, with 687 in good condition, which will be the project's focus. One hundred forty books were identified as being destroyed, and 30 were identified as damaged but may be salvageable.

Planning: Part One – Academic Research

Getting this internship approved began with a conversation with the NETC Library Director, Caroline Hassler, who was enthusiastic about the prospect but concerned about the federal internship restrictions. The FEMA internship program is geared toward undergraduate students interested in a FEMA or another federal agency career. The requirements for a FEMA internship included 40 hours a week and a minimum requirement of three months. I could not commit to 40 hours per week for three months, so Hassler decided to take a different approach. Thanks to her creativity and weeks of working with the NETC lawyers, a memorandum of understanding (MOU) was created between the NFFF and NETC (Appendix A). This made my internship official with the NFFF, yet Hassler could serve as my internship supervisor.

The MOU between the NFFF and the NETC is an excellent example of a partnership between an academic library and other organizations. Henderson (2016) recognized the benefit of this type of partnership, stating, “Academic libraries are often expected to demonstrate value to their communities, and building partnerships can help accomplish this goal” (p. 29).

Henderson (2016) goes on to discuss that good partnerships have “shared goals and purpose; clear objectives and plan; dedication; good communication; resources; and adaptability” (p. 42). The MOU clearly states the objectives and plan; the remaining factors are my and Hassler's responsibility. The dedication factor helps make the other factors attainable.

Another benefit of the partnership outlined in the MOU is to support the NETC Library in its efforts to maintain relevance within its many-layered government structure. As Grisales Bohorquez, Ruan, & Williams (2022) note, “Key to their [special libraries] practice is a need to constantly prove their value to their parent organization, whose mission and administration structure determines the library’s budget and possibilities for action” (p.44). The MOU between the NFFF and NETC has the potential to raise the visibility of the NETC Library and its services within NFFF’s community of fire service members through its social media and other marketing efforts.

Planning: Part Two – Stakeholders’ Review

The NETC Library supports the “National Fire Academy and Emergency Management instructional and research programs by providing relevant collections, tools for resource discovery, and classroom-based and individual research assistance” (National Emergency Training Center, n.d.). Because of the donated collection's content material, most collection users are expected to be NFA students. The library offers different services depending on the individual’s role. For example, instructors and training specialists can access e-books for classes, whereas students do not have direct access (NETC Library Services, n.d.). The library also offers interlibrary loans to public, corporate, and academic libraries (NETC Library Research, n.d.).

NFA students are predominantly fire chiefs and instructors furthering their education for personal or professional reasons (Hassler, personal communication, September 13, 2023). Many books in the donated collection are related to firefighter safety, including memoirs from individual fire service leaders. Other books are related to the evolution of firefighter safety procedures and protocols. Ruan (2011) states, “The dynamic nature and uncertainty of the fire service business as well as the task complexity are basic catalysts for the instructor participants’ information-seeking and sharing behaviors, which motivate them to keep seeking the best piece of information to ensure the safety of firefighters” (p. ii-iii). This library collection will allow firefighters to seek information that is otherwise not easily and readily available. While NFA students are on campus for one week or two weeks, accessing material to read for their studies and enjoyment is beneficial.

The NFFF serves fire department members and families of fallen firefighters. The donated collection housed in the NFFF offices will bring NFA students into the National Fallen Firefighters Memorial Chapel. This will allow students to browse the library collection and use the library room for individual study.

In addition to the books being processed for addition to the NETC library catalog, the donated collection also has about 150 children’s books related to firefighting. In discussions with the donor, it was determined that these books would be best for the children of fallen firefighters to use when visiting the NFFF office. A few books will be set aside because of their historical significance, but most of them will be able to be enjoyed by children. Because of time limitations, it was determined that the children’s books would not be included in this project but would be cataloged in the future.

Project Implementation

Phase One: Initiating

The NFFF collection would not be physically located in the NETC Library because they cannot accept donated books. The NFFF dedicated a room in the choir loft of the National Fallen Firefighters Memorial Chapel to the library collection. The room had been a spare office but was quickly transformed into a library with IKEA bookcases and a table.

Tippett, A. (2023, September 9). Room in the National Fallen Firefighters Memorial Chapel in Emmitsburg, Maryland, before being turned into a library [Photo].

The books had been stored in a different building on the NETC campus. The books were moved into the National Fallen Firefighters Memorial Chapel and unboxed. The books were cross-checked against a spreadsheet with basic book information during the unboxing. It was important to ensure this information was correct because I would use the spreadsheet to look up books in the OCLC and the NETC catalog. Because many of the books were older versions of books, I needed to make sure the ISBN was correct and not rely on the title and the author. It was also important to ensure that the spreadsheet was accurate because there were two possible government shutdowns during my internship. If the government had shut down, I would have been unable to access the NETC campus, so I would need to rely on the spreadsheet rather than the physical books.

The spreadsheet included an identifier of the storage box. So, when the books were unloaded onto the shelves in the new NFFF library, I placed sticky notes on the shelves with the books so I could locate books quickly as needed. This process also allowed me to identify the books that were damaged beyond repair during the flood. I was able to note those books on the spreadsheet.

Phase Two: Planning

I divided the donated books into four groups to prioritize the time allotted for my internship. The groups were:

Group A: NFFF books that are in the NETC catalog

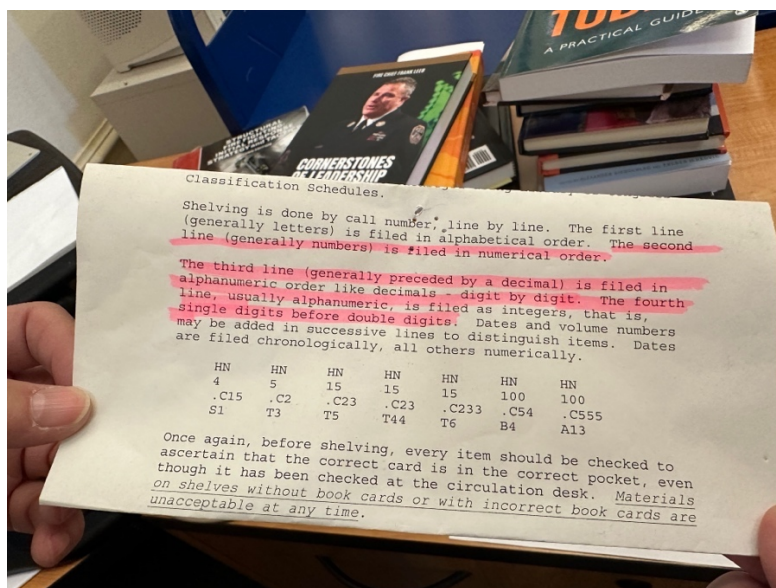

Group B: NFFF books that are not in the NETC catalog but are in OCLC WorldShare

Group C: NFFF books that are not in OCLC WorldShare

Group D: NFFF books damaged in the flood but may be salvageable.

Hassler agreed with this approach and worked on getting my access to the OCLC WorldShare account and the NETC catalog platform. This proved challenging because I am not an employee or intern of FEMA, and the sites are only normally accessible by federal employees or contractors. However, Hassler was able to make an exception because of the MOU between NFFF and NETC.

Hassler recommended I look up every book on my spreadsheet on the OCLC WorldShare to determine the OCLC number. Once the OCLC number was found, I was to add it to my spreadsheet. The books that are in the NETC collection that are also in the NFFF collection would become Group A books, the first books added to the NETC Bibliovation as the NFFF Library. The Group B books, which are not in the NETC catalog but have an OCLC number, would be batch-uploaded by Hassler. The plan was for me to label all books in Group A and Group B during the internship. Time permitting, I would work on the other book groups.

Hassler and I spent time deciding on the best way to have the NFFF books labeled in the NETC catalog. We took into consideration the end-user using the catalog. We determined that it was best to create a website page on the NFFF website (www.firehero.org/museum), and the book listing in the NETC catalog would refer people to visit that website page. Information could then be updated as needed when accessing the library material. The collection also included other firefighter memorabilia, which could be displayed on that website page. For example, the NETC Library currently shows firefighter helmets in the collection. Earlier in the year, NETC Library staff created a bibguide for the helmets (<https://netc-library.libguides.com/Helmets>).

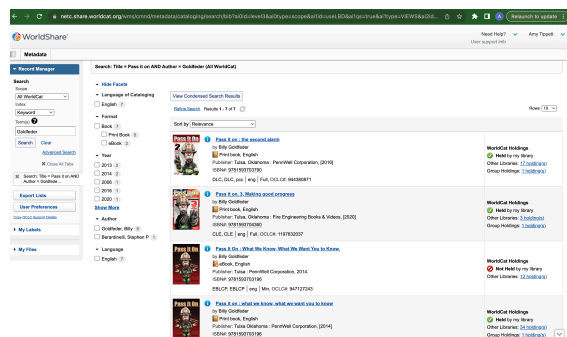

Hassler and I also discussed if the NFFF Library should use the Library of Congress numbers like the NETC Library uses or if it made more sense to use a different cataloging format, such as by topic or sequential. I decided to use the Library of Congress numbers for a few reasons. First, it would be consistent with the NETC library, so it would be easier to integrate if NETC could take possession of this collection at any point in the future. Second, suppose, for some reason, the NFFF could no longer house the collection in the future. In that case, it may be easier to donate the collection to another fire service library at a university if the books were already labeled with the Library of Congress number. Hassler noted that the NETC Library does not use the pre-set headings for the Library of Congress because they found them too general and not helpful for their purposes. They have created a system of headings more specific to their users' needs.

Phase Three: Executing

I looked up the books on the collection spreadsheet in OCLC WorldShare and captured the OCLC number on the spreadsheet. I also noted on the spreadsheet books that it would be useful for NFFF social media to promote the library during the year. For example, books about major fires could be posted on NFFF social media on the anniversary dates of the fires.

Appendix B includes the books identified for potential social media posts. I also noted rare books (Appendix C) listed in OCLC WorldShare.

Tippett, A. (2023, November 12) Sample of default fields in NETC Bibliovation for NFFF Book Collection [Photo].

I added the Library of Congress number for each book in the NETC Collection to the spreadsheet so I could easily export them into a Word document to do a mail merge to make the labels. I then created the labels and placed them on the book with clear label protectors. I was able to label all the Group A books, organize them, and put them on the shelves in the new NFFF Library. The Group B books (located in OCLC but not in the NETC catalog) were in the process of being batch-loaded into the NETC Catalog-NFFF Library. Due to time constraints, the NETC librarian was not able to accomplish in time for this impact report. Once they are uploaded, I will print the labels and put them on the remaining Group B books.

Phase Four: Monitoring

I frequently spot-checked my accuracy to identify the correct book since many titles are similar. I also double-checked every label I placed on a book. I learned quickly that accuracy is more important than speed, as I did find two or three mistakes I made based on the similarity of books but different editions. After each session of adding books to the NETC Bibliovation, I would run a report of the newly added books and confirm all the books were added correctly. Although this process was time-consuming, it was time well spent for the future.

Phase Five: Conclusion

The expected outcome of this project was the creation of the NFFF library collection as part of the NETC library. While not all of the books were added, the process to do so is well established and it is the intent of all parties to continue to complete the integration of the donated books into the NFFF library. The addition of rare and unique books captures the history of firefighting books, especially those related to Hartford, Connecticut, and Los Angeles, California. The vast collection of books about firefighting apparatus is a great addition to the books available through NETC. Because the books are in the NETC system, they will also be available for loan to other entities. In some cases, books that may be placed on long-term loan to fire department museums have been identified.

The unexpected outcomes of this project include three key areas – partnership enhancement, marketing efforts to raise awareness of NETC and NFFF, and opening the door to other book donations.

The NFFF and NETC have always had a good relationship since they share the same campus. However, the purposes of the two organizations are so very different that there are not frequent interactions. The main time staff interact with each other is during an annual memorial for fallen firefighters. But other than that, the staff didn't clearly understand what the other entity did. Because of this project, NETC and NFFF staff are more familiar with the duties of the other entity. There is discussion about other programs working together. For example, there is an annual women's weekend for fire officers that the NETC manages. NFFF has now been invited to host an exhibit table to promote the various training programs available to fire service members. The increased interest in both entities has been a positive experience for all involved.

The NETC library is one aspect of the EMI and NFA. Students on campus used the library as needed for research, but it wasn't considered a "must-visit" place on campus because of the availability of virtual information. Because of the helmets in the library, more and more students are stopping into the NETC library to see the helmets and learn more about the library. That provides NETC librarians to talk about the partnership and helps promote the NFFF. In turn, signage in the NFFF chapel now encourages visitors to go to the library. This cross-promotion effort will be supported by the NFFF website featuring information about the new NFFF library and its partnership with NETC. The linkage of these two entities is a positive for both organizations, and the hope is that this will continue to grow.

As people in the fire service community have learned of this partnership and the new NFFF library, NFFF has been approached by people asking if they can donate their books to the NFFF. The current executive director of the NFFF is retiring at the end of the year and has offered to donate his books to the NFFF library. While the current NFFF collection has books through the early 2000s, the executive director's collection is from the past twenty years. The addition of his books will greatly enhance the collection by bringing it up to date. I foresaw that this type of thing would happen, so when deciding on the bookcases, I ensured there was plenty of room for growth.

I have reported the library's growth to the collection's donors. They have been impressed with the methods used to catalog their collection. Because of this, they have included the NFFF in their estate planning and specified that the funds be used for the maintenance and upkeep of the library.

Assessment Analysis

Of the 857 books donated, 687 books had the potential to be added to the NFFF library during the internship period. As Figure 2 depicts, of the 687 books deemed to be in good condition, 527 books were found in the OCLC, and 160 books were not found in the OCLC. Of the books found in OCLC, 218 were identified as currently in the NETC catalog, and the Library of Congress Number was used to label those books. This means that 309 books are in OCLC, which the NFFF Library will have that NETC doesn't, resulting in their patrons having access to those books. In addition, 160 books were not in OCLC or NETC and will need to be manually entered in OCLC in the future.

As stated in the MOU (Appendix A) between NETC and NFFF, one of the purposes of this partnership was to make the materials available through the NETC catalog. Specifically, the MOU noted, "Desirable items in the collection include materials relating to firefighting in the 19th century, fire prevention and fire safety in the 20th century, and various fire code manuals and U.S. Government publications from the 1950s.” When all of the books from the donated collection are added to the NETC catalog, there will be a total of 470 new books available for NETC Library patrons.

The total number of books labeled and shelved at this time is 218 books. This includes the books that are in Group A. The Group B books have been identified but have not been labeled yet.

Unfortunately, there was not enough time to add the 160 books not in OCLC or work on the 30 salvageable books. As Hassler mentioned to me when I started, 160 hours to build a library, from building bookcases to processing hundreds of books, was an ambitious goal.

The total number of books currently added to the NFFF library is 218. A list of the books is included in Appendix D. An additional 309 books will be labeled and added to the NETC catalog for a total of 527 books. The remaining 160 books that are not in OCLC will be dealt with case-by-case to determine if the book should be added to the OCLC or if an internal classification system will be created.

Professional Learning & Reflection

When I first began looking at potential internship sites, I had my mind set on working for a public library to gain experience that may be useful when I start to job hunt. Unfortunately, the public libraries near me didn't feel they had the time to steward an intern this semester. My backup plan was an internship with the NETC library, as I had already established a relationship with their librarian. I hadn't connected the dots with the specific project yet, so I wasn't sure what kind of project I could do for them that would benefit them and me.

Once this project began to be developed, I realized how fortunate I was that the public libraries said no to me. I used the term unexpected outcomes in my conclusion, and I think this whole project could be themed "unexpected outcomes." This was the experience of a lifetime to be entrusted with building a library from scratch, with a safety net of being mentored by a seasoned librarian.

When I first saw the boxes of books in the storage room, some damaged by a flood, it was hard for me to imagine the final product. But I jumped in, moved many boxes of books, built bookcases, and determined the room's layout. I became familiar with many ways to search for books in OCLC, use the NETC catalog platform, and create a backup plan in an Excel spreadsheet in case the government platforms were no longer available for some reason. I managed the anxiety of two potential government shutdowns that would have meant I wouldn't have had access to the books or the library.

The community of the fire service is relatively small – about a million firefighters. The NETC campus attracts leaders and future leaders to attend the Emergency Management Institute and the National Fire Academy. Oftentimes, students are on campus for two weeks with very little to do except study. In creating this library and reading room, there is a new place for students to visit while on campus. In doing this, I am confident that people will enter the chapel and learn about the NFFF rather than just walk by the building. So, the unintended consequence is that more people will learn about the work of the NFFF.

The NETC librarian has been a wonderful source of inspiration, information, and kindness in sharing her enthusiasm of serving her stakeholders. She has gone above and beyond in thinking through decisions, like how the collection should be listed on their platform, to ensure that when both of us are no longer working in these libraries, that it will be easy for the next person to pick up where we left off.

The fire service has been part of my life for over twenty years through my work with national fire service organizations. As I transition to a new career as a librarian, being able to work on this project was the perfect cross-section of two areas I care very much about. I will continue to work on the library in 2024 because I am committed to completing what I have started.

Memorandum of Understanding between NETC and NFFF

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING
THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY TRAINING CENTER LIBRARY AND THE NATIONAL FALLEN FIREFIGHTER FOUNDATION
FOR
ENHANCING RESEARCH CAPABILITIES FOR NETC STUDENTS
THROUGH PROVIDING ACCESS TO A SPECIAL COLLECTION OF DONATED FIRE SERVICE BOOKS AND MATERIALS

I. Parties:

The parties to this Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) are the National Emergency Training Center (NETC) Library, a federal entity established within and operated by the United States Fire Administration (USFA), and the National Fallen Firefighters Foundation (NFFF or Foundation), a federally chartered non-profit corporation, organized under the laws of the State of Maryland.

II. Authority:

This agreement is authorized by the Federal Fire Prevention and Control Act of 1974, as amended (Public Law No. 93-498, 15 U.S.C. §2201 et seq.), and chapter 1513 of Public Law No. 105-225 (36 U.S.C. §§151301-151311).

III. Background:

A. The U.S. Fire Administration's NETC Library in Emmitsburg, Maryland provides key academic support services to the National Fire Academy (NFA) and the Emergency Management Institute (EMI), including developing and maintaining the NETC Library's collection of research materials for the benefit of NFA and EMI student coursework. The NETC Library is the primary information resource for students researching fire, emergency management, and other all-hazards subjects.

Furthering its commitment to providing students on the NETC campus with access to the most relevant and current materials, the NETC Library may on occasion leverage opportunities for interlibrary cooperation and collection sharing for the purpose of enhancing the quality and quantity of research materials which are discoverable when searching the NETC Library Catalog.

B. Consistent with the Foundation's authority to receive and manage certain public donations, the NFFF also manages and maintains its own collection of books and materials relevant to the fire service, including historical materials relating to fire and life safety. The books and materials owned by NFFF includes a recent donation of a special collection of fire-service related books which encompass various relevant topics, offering a comprehensive understanding of the fire service in the Nation and its evolution.

The collection consists of a broad array of both current and historical materials. Desirable items in the collection include materials relating to firefighting in the 19th century, fire prevention and fire safety in the 20th century, and various fire code manuals and U.S. Government publications from the 1950's. The collection also provides students with professional perspectives on certain specific major fires, as well as significant regional materials from the Northeast and California.

While the collection is currently managed and maintained by the NFFF, the books and materials are not yet cataloged or available to NETC students for use in academic research when searching through the NETC Library digital catalog.

IV. Purpose:

The purpose of this agreement is to memorialize roles and responsibilities for assessing the content and condition of the special collection and cataloging the maximum amount of materials worthy of incorporation into the NETC Library digital catalog.

A collaborative effort subject to USFA's guidance and oversight will ensure that the assessment and cataloging of the collection is done properly, resulting in the most valuable items in the collection being discoverable, available, and usable to NETC students doing research through the NETC catalog.

V. Responsibilities:

The NETC Library has primary oversight responsibility for assessing and cataloging the collection. The NETC Library and the NFFF will coordinate as agreed and authorized, consistent with the following individual and joint responsibilities:

A. USFA/NETC Library will:

- assist the NFFF in developing a responsible workplan and project timeline which maximizes availability and access to academically valuable items. The final workplan, subject to USFA approval, should include a preliminary assessment of the collection for suitability of the books and materials for cataloging.
- inform and educate the NFFF staff assigned to the project as needed regarding the appropriate international standards for bibliographic description, including local practices necessary for ensuring the bibliographic records for the materials can be located by NETC students when searching the NETC digital catalog,
- meet regularly with NFFF to monitor progress, including revising the workplan as needed to ensure timely completion and success of the project.
- maintain federal records for the project. The USFA/NETC POC may perform administrative tasks relating to project effort, as necessary—including intern evaluations, certifications of time and effort, and other tasks which are consistent with the role of internship site supervisor.

B. National Fallen Firefighters Foundation will:

- provide all staff or internship hours of effort, free of cost to the federal government, in the amount of hours necessary to assess and identify the most important items in the collection, and to catalog them to the greatest extent practicable during the term of this MOU.
  - will ensure that the NFFF staff or intern assigned to the project meets regularly with the NETC Librarian to report project progress.
  - direct and control NFFF staff or interns assigned to the project to ensure full and consistent compliance with the technical direction provided by the NETC Librarian regarding proper cataloging techniques and local practices.
  - facilitate permanent access to the special collection materials for any NETC Library patron who requests the opportunity to review the materials for research purposes. Permanent access to the collection is for review of the materials only and does not include the physical lending of the items from the collection.
- C. Joint Responsibilities:
- USFA and NFFF will coordinate in a collaborative manner to ensure the project is completed during the term of this agreement.
  - USFA and NFFF will provide respective staff hours and effort necessary for completing this project. The respective staff effort of the organizations shall be provided free of cost to the other party.
  - USFA and NFFF program points of contact will keep their appropriate organizational leadership informed of the progress of the project.
